

WHAT PARTICIPANTS ARE SAYING ABOUT OUR PROGRAM:

"I loved the new experiences in the outdoors!"

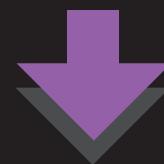

"Everything that we did was both personally rewarding and useful to my teaching profession."

"This is the best class that I have ever taken."

"This was a great time. I got to do the things that I should have done as a kid!"

"I found the AWLS program to be marvelously run. You took into consideration the elements, fed us well, taught us the activities and covered them in depth. All the experiences I had were excellent."

"I wish more teachers and leaders would take advantage of this opportunity."

Other outdoor skills camps/workshops available through the DNR include:

Promoting an appreciation of the outdoors through education and involvement in partnership with the Iowa Chapter of Safari Club International and the Iowa Department of Natural Resources.

HISTORY

The first Iowa American Wilderness Leadership School (AWLS) was held in 1988, with one or sometimes two programs offered each year. Iowa's AWLS is a regional offshoot of the National AWLS program held at Jackson Hole, WY, and has a well-established reputation as a high quality educational experience. Participants are not only involved in the activities, but they receive the resources needed to share the activities in their educational settings.

AGENDA

The agenda is designed for educators of all types to experience the outdoors and take these experiences back to their students. The five-day program changes each year, but includes orienteering, shooting of all types, wildlife calling, turtle trapping, fishing (lake, stream and pond), canoeing, camping, fish shocking, bird banding, rock climbing, fly tying and archery. Participants may also study aquatic life, reptiles and amphibians, biotechnology, stream table use, Global Positioning Systems (GPS) and visits to regional natural resource sites.

FACILITY

The AWLS program is headquartered at the Springbrook Conservation Education Center, located an hour northwest of Des Moines, in Springbrook State Park. The diverse habitats and activities available at the facility make it an ideal location for the program.

LODGING

Lodging includes modern, air-conditioned/heated dormitories with eight people per room. Bedding and towels are provided, with shower and lounge facilities in the dorms. All meals are included.

TO REGISTER

Registration information is available on the web at www.iowadnr.gov (click on "education" then "camps and workshops") or contact the Springbrook Conservation Education Center, 2473 160th Rd., Guthrie Center, Iowa 50115, 641-747-8383 ext. 11.

COST

Program fees cover lodging, meals, materials and associated activities. Additional funding support is generally given by the Iowa Chapter of Safari Club International.

GRADUATE CREDIT

Graduate credit is available through Drake University for an additional fee payable at registration. Additional information is available each year as the credits are approved. Traditionally, Drake offers three credits for the course.
